South Dakota's Human Trafficking Task Force recently released a report that details the growth in the industry. It says numbers of prostitutes and sex trafficking victims have risen in South Dakota. Human trafficking victims are more often girls who are used sexually. The national average for human trafficking victims is about 20,000 a year. That number is up about 30 percent in the past year. That number has increased from about 7,000 the previous year. As a family therapist, Virginia is seeing more kids who have been affected by human trafficking. "People may think that this is something that only happens in faraway places, but we have definitely seen it here in South Dakota," Virginia said. "There is the possibility of anything happening in anywhere. What's happening now is kids are being brought into the state." The increase in the number of people being trafficked within South Dakota is a result of more trafficking happening here than in other states. "So they could be being trafficked in our communities," Virginia said. "They're being trafficked on the playgrounds and in our churches. They're being trafficked and abused on our playgrounds, and we don't even realize it." South Dakota has several programs to help children who may be trafficked. "I think that one of the biggest things that we are seeing is the Internet," Virginia said. "It's easy to manipulate kids online, and that's where they are most vulnerable." The best thing to do if you are concerned or believe there is a trafficking situation is to call authorities. However, there is a hotline for the National Human Trafficking Resource Center in Rapid City. The 24-hour hotline is 1-888-3737-888. For those who are victims, it's very important to get help. Virginia says when children are in danger, it's a race against time and the more help that they get, the better off they are. The present invention relates to a method for desiccating mineralized surfaces of the human or animal body to produce a calcium phosphate surface layer with the natural appearance of the body. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method for softening dead tissue of an animal including, but not limited to, a human being. It is well known that a

Q: What does it mean to 'date' something? I can date a bag of chips. What does it mean to 'date' something? Is this a metaphor? A: It's a metaphor. If you date someone or something, you put a stamp on it that indicates time and now. You can also date something with time to reflect that you've done it. This is actually a common practice in Britain. I remember once when I was teaching during British school holiday. I would regularly ask my class to date a piece of paper, so I could see their progress as the school holiday goes on. I would also date the homework or school report after marking their work, to see whether they have done any. (It is done this way with animals too, like chickens, goldfish and so on.) They would put the date in the special corner of the paper (or their report). When a person dies, their death date is stamped in the date line of the newspaper. The box office will automatically not release the ticket, until this date has been reached. When you can't be there to visit someone any more, you stamp the date when you no longer visit him/her. We also date our pictures. When a child is born, the birthdate is filled in the date line of his/her birth certificate. A: It's a metaphorical noun, and dates are used in jokes like the one you quote. A better example might be that something is "no longer dating". As to why "the bag of chips" might refer to date: Maybe the chips are the only thing to be had in the fast food restaurant, and a place where you can get bags of chips might be your designated date spot. A: Also "date" with regards to student tests in secondary schools is a bad and the colloquial meaning. Passed or failed the test the day before or day after the test. Also the headteacher puts a date on the timetable. Step by Step: Creating a Beautiful Interactive Website with HTML5 & CSS3 With both Microsoft and Apple making strides to ensure that the vast majority of their respective operating system users have appropriate HTML5 and CSS3 support, including Java for Microsoft, it seems only a matter of time before these standards become de facto across the web. Allowing interactive elements to be implemented with JavaScript is a great thing
